Pula is the largest town on Istrian peninsula. It has a population of 82 000 inhabitants. It developed in the inner part of an almost completely enclosed, easily protected bay where Austria built an arsenal and its largest naval base in the middle of the last century. Pula is today an important harbour and industrial town. The town has a highly developed artistic, cultural and educational life. With its good traffic connections, numerous cultural and historical sites, pleasant climate, very attractive coastline and beautiful beaches, Pula has become a major tourist resort. The most significant monument is the amphitheatre (Arena), one of five amphitheatres in the world, as well as one of the best preserved Roman structures of its kind in the world. There are other monuments to visit: Augustus Temple, Hercule's and Twin gates, Sergius Arch.
